13th SUNDAY in Ordinary Time - A

To walk as disciples, the gospel tells us, we must be ready to prefer Jesus to everyone we love and be willing to make ourselves completely available to him. Jesus' road included the cross; his follower cannot shrink from sharing their Master's destiny. But what is the reward? Such deep communion between disciple and the Lord that whoever receives the one welcomes the other- and the Father who sent his Son, As Christians we have already experienced that union ritually, St. Paul informs us. Our baptism signified immersion in Jesus' death to that we might rise with him. But we must die to sin, renouncing our sinful; inclinations, in order to become alive to God. To die with Christ is to find life; this is the paradox of Christian existence. At times we may be tempted to think that everything is lost. But faith assures us that giving to God of ourselves and our possessions will be repaid beyond all our hopes.
